

TO SEIZE COAL FIELDS—GERMAN OFFER REJECTED

"Q" SWITCHMAN AND TWO LOCAL MEN UP IN BOX-CAR THEFTS

J. A. Mitchell, Joe Hahn and John Brosse Held at Central Station

SHOES AND OTHER STUFF "PLANTED" AT HAHN'S

Hahn and Brosse Held as Material Witnesses

J. A. MITCHELL, Burlington switchman of Savanna, Ill., is under arrest charged with having stolen goods in his possession, following discovery of a series of box-car robberies extending over several months.

Mitchell, who has been in the employ of the Burlington railroad here as a switchman for the past ten months, has been found in possession of goods stolen from freight cars of the Burlington road, it is alleged, and is being held at Central station pending further investigation and information in the case, according to a statement of A. D. Garrow, special agent of the "Q."

Stolen goods in the form of shoes, stockings and other materials were found "planted" in the establishment of Joe Hahn, 801 Rose street, it was said on Thursday. Hahn is being held at Central station as a material witness in the case. John Brosse, who admits having in his possession a pair of shoes obtained from Mitchell, is also being held at the station.

Asked about the quantity of goods stolen from the Burlington cars during the past few months, Agent Garrow stated that in addition to the goods actually found in connection with the present case, bicycle and automobile tires have been missed on recent occasions. Although it is difficult to determine the exact place where the goods have been taken, it is the general opinion that the cars have been "tripped" at Grand Crossing.

While several attempts have been made to question him with regard to his knowledge of the theft, Mitchell so far denies any connection with the affair. He has stood "pat" on each attempt of Chief Webster and Special Agent Garrow to discover the names of others implicated in and the methods of the robbery.

Previous to his employment by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad in this city, Mitchell was said to have been in the employ of the Milwaukee railroad company at Savanna, Ill. It was learned that the prisoner has a police record in that city, having been connected with a similar robbery case while employed by the Milwaukee railroad, according to a statement of Agent Garrow. He is said to have settled for the goods stolen in Savanna.

The case will be heard in court either Friday or Saturday, it was announced.

INVESTMENT IN WISCONSIN AGRICULTURE ESTIMATED AT THREE AND A HALF BILLIONS

MADISON, Wis.—Over $3,501,000,000 is invested in Wisconsin's agriculture, from which an annual income of over $500,000,000 is realized, according to C. P. Norford, Wisconsin commissioner of agriculture, in his report to the legislature Wednesday.

Engaged in the industry are 1,500,000 people, or over 52 per cent of the population of the state. Wisconsin is still primarily a rural commonwealth, in spite of her enormous manufacturing resources, the report says.

Wisconsin farm crops in 1919 reached the peak value of $380,000,000, four per cent greater than in 1918 and 198 per cent greater than in 1909. Livestock products in 1919 were valued at $372,000,000, 94 per cent greater than in 1918 and 235 per cent greater than in 1909.

Because of the great slump in the price of farm products which occurred late in 1920 and is still continuing, it is felt that the record value of 1919 will be the high water mark for some years to come.

The corn crops of 1919 and 1920 were the two largest in the history of the state. The 1919 crop was a "bumper" crop, 85,471,000 bushels being produced on 1,820,000 acres, with the highest average yield ever reached.

The oats crop totaled over 100,000,000 bushels. Wheat production was stimulated during the war from 230,000 in 1917 to 519,000 acres in 1919. In 1920 the acreage dropped to 315,000 acres, and as the yields have been disappointing, more attention is being paid to oats and barley.

Barley dropped from $25,441,000 bushels in 1918 to 13,587,000 bushels in 1919, largely because of the reduced market for this crop since the eighteenth amendment has been in force. Wisconsin's hay crop exceeded 5,000,000 tons. The potato crop for 1920 is estimated at 52,000,000 bushels, a little in excess of the 1919 yield.

In 1919 Wisconsin led all states in or bordering on the corn belt in per acre yield of corn; was first in production of clover seed, canning peas, hemp, cigar-type tobacco and first in the number of milk cows and sows.

Mr. Snell probably does not realize that if the Irish sympathizers in this country wanted to go to Ireland to fight they would be barred by the English government. During the late war when we sympathized with Belgium it was not necessary for this whole nation to go to Belgium in order to show its good will. When Belgium was invaded by Germany the loudest outcry came from the English government and the English press against the vio-

If Belgium deserved her liberty so does Ireland and he is a queer specimen of an American who would object to every other country having its just rights. Security for the Note

ONE is inclined to feel that the reparations matter is making some progress. The German offer, insofar at least as concerned its concrete cash proposal, was a distinct advance upon anything that her previous attitude had led the world to expect without further pressure, and if it be true, as hinted in Wednesday's dispatches, that she is not disposed to be stickish about the conditions under which she will carry out her agreement to pay, the settlement ought not to be far off.

But Germany cannot very well expect the allies to abandon the "regime of sanctions" complained of in her note to Washington, or to relieve her of the "unproductive expenditures" of the army of occupation. The allies have no other security for reparations than these, and if they are surrendered the Germans might default or dispute the payments due with comparative impunity. These conditions of which Germany complains are burdensome, alike to Germany and to the allies; they are drags on economic restoration everywhere, but Germany cannot have them removed except by meeting the obligations which she has accepted. Let Germany do as France did after '71—buckle down and pay the bill—and she will find her appeals for assistance and sympathetic understanding much more favorably heard.

It is this demand for surrender of the allied position of advantage, one imagines, that is motivating the French attitude of dissatisfaction with the German reparations offer. As a cash proposition on which to base negotiations the proposal is generally viewed favorably outside of France. But the string to it, especially in view of the recalcitrance which Germany has exhibited in the matter ever since the armistice and the signing of the treaty, arouses suspicion. A debtor whose bills are habitually collected by the sheriff need not be indignant nor astonished if his promissory note is not accepted without security.

Probe the Scandal

THE request of members of the state conservation commission for a joint legislative investigation of charges of fraud made against them deserves consideration. Were it merely a matter of the personal vindication of the commissioners, the redress and exoneration which they seek could well come from the courts, but there exists another phase of the matter in which the legislature is doubtless interested.

There is on foot a plan to reorganize the present conservation commission upon a one-man basis. It is understood that at least one of the persons alleged to have been responsible for the attack upon the integrity of the commissioners has been working in favor of this measure, and it is fair to assume that the stories of grafting were circulated as a means of supporting a reorganization plan which would, among other things, dispose of the services of the present commissioners and create new jobs for others.

Nor is the effort likely to be without avail. As long as there remains the slightest unanswerable doubt of the integrity of the commissioners, members who have heard the gossip and who have no close personal acquaintance with the commissioners and no special knowledge of their characters, will be more ready to vote for reorganization than they would were the charges proven untrue. In other words, yarns alleging graft, given currency about the state, and not officially before the legislature, would exert an influence upon important legislation.

We are not inclined hastily to prejudice in such matters, but the demand made by the commissioners for a full investigation lends support to the feeling that their records will bear scrutiny. It is improbable that members of the legislature, regardless of political lines, lack confidence in the honesty of the commissioners, but that is all the more reason why the latter should be given an opportunity to defend themselves.

Moreover, the sportsmen of the state want the facts. They want to know whether the state has an honorable conservation commission. If it has, they want to know whether any officer or representative of the Wisconsin Protective association has become a scandalmonger engaged in the defamation of the commissioners. If they find that such a thing has come to pass, and if those responsible fail to justify their words, the sportsmen will doubtless have something to say about the matter. Wisconsin sportsmen have banded together to protect fish and game, not to create an agency for anybody's political schemes.

The Isolation Fiction

INCIDENTALLY, the present status of the reparations situation illustrates sufficiently how possible it may be for the United States to avoid foreign complications and live to itself alone. After the sort of attack by which the democratic redoubt was stormed in the last campaign it is probable that President Harding for the sake of consistency, would have kept his fingers out of the European pie if he could at all have done so. But the pressure of necessity for getting Europe on its feet, if the United States is to recover traditional republican prosperity, was greater than any dictate of political consistency. Invited to take a hand, President Harding did so—and the usages of diplomacy make it a reasonable inference that Germany knew what the answer would be before she made the invitation. We are in European affairs again up to the neck, and the administration welcomed the opportunity to get in, but that need not alarm any one. We were never really out of them—we had merely turned our back upon our mutual troubles and endeavored to "kid" ourselves that we were out. It is much better this way, since our destinies as a civilized country are inevitably entwined with those of civilized Europe. Now we are frankly in, doing our best for civilization and for our own interests. That's where we belong, and we can go at the job better realizing what we are doing and why than by attempting to maintain a fiction of isolation in the face of the facts. Eventually a machinery of co-operation between nations—a league of nations, an association of nations, a super-state; the name doesn't matter—will develop to make the work easier and standardize the procedure, and we will be in that, too. If the present League of Nations is not it, it is at least the germ of it—the necessary beginning.

Wild Flowers Vanish

TRAILING ARBUTUS and many other wild flowers are becoming extinct. They are being destroyed by misguided persons who go out each spring, year after year, to "pick wild flowers." Trailing arbutus suffers most. For when it is torn up by the roots, as usually is done, the entire plant is destroyed.

The inclination to pluck a delicate, fragile wild flower is strong in most persons who come upon it in the spring and think it beautiful. This is true even with many who know such flowers will quickly. Some fall apart almost as soon as they are seized. One thoughtless person destroys a plant or patch of plants which might remain a joy to hundreds. To resist this impulse and stay one's own destructive hand is part of being civilized.

M. J. Hastings, residing at 114 North Fifth street, was today appointed by Governor La Follette as oil inspector of La Crosse, Trempealeau, Vernon and Buffalo counties.

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY
It is rumored La Crosse is soon to have an organization resembling Tammany of New York. The members will have a "Hall" and take a hand in city elections and politics.

At the board of education meeting last night plans were made for more school accommodations. It was decided to have a new four-room building in place of the two-room building on Vine street, a new four-room building in place of the present North La Crosse middle school, and a four-room addition to the Sixth district school. This will add twelve rooms and will greatly relieve the present crowded conditions in the schools.

Citizens residing on Redfield street from Ninth to Fourteenth have signed a petition to the common council asking that that part of the street be graded and sidewalked during the coming summer. The council will take up this matter at its meeting tonight.

Encampment No. 88, Union Veterans' Legion of La Crosse was instituted in this city last night. It is the second in Wisconsin and the eighty-eighth in the United States. This Veterans' Legion does not in any way antagonize the Grand Army of the Republic because many comrades belong to both organizations.

A Man For the Ages
BY
Irving Bacheller
(Copyright 1919 by Irving Bacheller)

After a little silence Jim rose from the ground. She stood, for a moment, wiping her eyes. Her form straightened and was presently erect. Her soul resented the injustice she had suffered. There was a wonderful and touching dignity in her voice and manner when she asked: "Why didn't he write to me?"

"He must have written to you," she said, calmly, thoughtfully. She spoke as she stood looking off at the fading glow in the west.

"It is terrible how things can work together to break heart and will of a woman. Write to Harry and tell him that he must not come to see me again. I have promised to marry another man."

"I hope it isn't Davis," said Samson.

"It is Davis," she said.

"I don't like him. I don't think he's honest."

"But he has been wonderfully kind to me. Without his help we couldn't have lived. We couldn't even have given my father a decent burial. I suppose he has his faults. I no longer look for perfection in human beings."

"I have been out here to see you," she said.

"And he won't come. That man knows how to keep out of danger. I don't believe you'll marry him."

"Why?"

"Because I intend to be a father to you and pay all your debts," said Samson.

The doctor called from the door of the cabin.

"Blas said: 'God bless you and Harry,' as she turned away to take up her task again."

That night both of them began, as they say, to put two and two together. While he rode on in the growing dusk the keen intellect of Samson saw a convincing sequence of circumstances—the theft of the mail sack, the false account of Harry's death, the failure of his letters to reach their destination, and the fact that Jim had accepted money from Davis in time of need. A strong suspicion of foul play grew upon him and he began to consider what he could do in the matter.

Having found a creek he caught the glow of a light in the darkness a little way up the road. It was the lighted window of a cabin, before whose door he stopped his horse and dismounted.

"I am a belated and hungry traveler on my way to Chicago," he said to the man who presently greeted him from the open doorway.

"Have you come through Honey Creek settlement?" the latter asked.

"Left there about an hour ago," Samson replied.

"Sorry, mister, but I can't let you come into the house. If you'll move off a few feet I'll lay some grub on the chapter block and up the road about a half-mile you'll find a barn with some hay in it where you and your horse can spend the night under cover."

Samson moved away and soon the man brought a package of food and laid it on the block and ran back to the door.

"I'll lay a piece of silver on the block," Samson called.

"Not a darned cent," the man answered. "I hate like poison to turn a fellow away in the night, but we're awful scared here with children in the house. Good-by. You can't miss the barn. It's close as in the road."

Samson ate his luncheon in the darkness, as he rode and presently came upon the barn and unsaddled and hitched and fed his horse in one end of it—the beast having drunk his fill at the creek they had lately forded—and lay down to rest, for the night, with the saddle blanket beneath him and his coat for a cover. A wind from the north began to wail and whistle through the cracks in the barn and over his roof bringing cold weather. Samson's feet and legs had been wet in crossing so that he found it difficult to keep warm. He crept to the side of his horse, which had lain down, and found a degree of comfort in the heat of the animal. But it was a bad night, at best, with only a moment now and then, of a sort of one-eyed sleep in it.

"I've had many a long, hard fight, but this is the worst of them," Samson thought.

There's many a bad night in the history of the pioneer. His shadows falling on lonely, ill-marked roads cut by rivers, creeks and marshes and by slung through numerous miles of wild country. Samson was up and off at daylight in a bitter wind and six inches of snow. It was a kind of work he would not have undertaken upon any call less commanding than that of friendship. He reached Chicago at noon having had nothing to eat that day. There was no such eager, noisy crowd in the streets as he had seen before. The fever of speculation had passed. Some of the stores were closed; he counted a score of half-built structures getting weather-stained inside and out. But there were many people on the main thoroughfares, among whom were Europeans who had arrived the autumn before. They were changing but the marks of the yoke were still upon them. In Chicago were the virals of the west and they were very much alive in spite of the panic.

Samson bought some new clothes and had a bath and a good dinner at the City hotel. Then he went to the office of Mr. Lionel Davis. There to his surprise he met his old acquaintance, Eli Fredenberg, who greeted him with great warmth and told of having settled in Chicago.

A well-dressed young man came out of an inner office and informed him that Mr. Davis could not see him that day.

"I'd like to see Mr. Davis," said Samson as he left went away.

Underserved Praise

A school teacher was telling her class of youngsters the story of the discovery of America. "And," she ended, "all this happened more than four hundred years ago."

"See whiz," gasped one small boy, "what a memory you've got!"

Are Singing Insects Kept?

Far down in the Amazon region of South America there is a kind of cricket that the native captures and puts into a small wicker cage, for its song. The music it makes can be heard, they say, from one end of the village to the other.

"Huh; and we do all the work!"

U. S. SHIPS MORAL BUT EMPTY; BILL TO DAMPEN 'EM

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Sale of liquor on passenger steamers of American registry beyond the three-mile limit would be authorized under a bill introduced Wednesday by Representative Edmunds, republican, New Jersey.

Chairman Peterson of the shipping board, advocated modification of the law so as to permit American passenger steamers to compete with foreign vessels not restricted by prohibition regulations.

Mr. Edmunds said his bill would not give coastwise steamers the right to handle liquors and that it also would prevent the sale aboard foreign ships within the three-mile limit.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS NEWSPAPER
The Biggest Little Paper in the World
Edited by John H. Miller

THIS HIGH SCHOOL STARTS SOMETHING NEW—"SNAKE WEEK"

Special to Boys and Girls Newspaper
HENNINGTON, W. Va.—"Snake Week" was held recently at Enslow Junior High School, and many kinds of reptiles were brought by the boys and girls. The snakes were chloroformed and put in alcohol, and will be studied by students of the science department.

Some of the boys found a number of frog eggs. These were put into large glass jars filled with water. The students are watching the development of the eggs and will keep them until they reach the frog stage.

(What is your high school, Boy Scout troop, Lone Scout Tribe, Girl Scout Troop, Camp Fire Group, or club, doing that is out of the ordinary? Let others hear about it. Send the story to the editor for publication.)

DAILY HARDKNOT

If you can guess the four words described and arrange them according to their numbers you will have a word square. Word No. 1 means land bordering on the sea; 2, possessor; 3, a feminine name; 4, to snatch; 5, the largest kind of plants. (Answer to yesterday's: England, Holland, Belgium.)

Fruit Can Labels

When bought at the store fruit can labels may be too expensive. When made at home they may not be satisfactory, because the hurried housewife may not have had enough time to spend on them.

There's a chance for you to make money. You can make attractive labels on the typewriter, with a set of rubber type, or with pen and ink. Make a number of them on a large sheet of paper. If gummed paper isn't to be had at the store it can be made at home by smearing the back of a sheet with common mucilage. Apply the mucilage before cutting the labels apart.

On the arrival of the canning season carry a few sample labels around to the kitchen doors and take orders. Make your price reasonable, but large enough to pay the cost of materials and a little profit for yourself.

A FAMILIAR QUOTATION

(Who wrote it?)
Where ignorance is bliss, 'Tis folly to be wise.
Yesterday's: "There is no place like home."—John Howard Payne, "Home Sweet Home."

Oh, Gran'ma!
A small girl was talking with a friend whose English was not good, so she said, "Where's you gran'ma?"

Replied the other little girl, "Home with gran'pa."

CLUB OFFICERS, EDITORS of amateur papers, and no telling who else, will be interested in the article telling how to make a hectograph, which will be printed in this section tomorrow. Don't miss it.

Under the Skin

(By Dr. William E. Barton)
I met a man casually yesterday, and had no thought that I should meet him again, or that we had any considerable body of mutual interests. We were introduced by a man who knew us both, and who was talking to him when I entered the place where the two happened to be.

I learned that this new chance acquaintance was a dealer in automobile accessories, which is an honorable vocation, but one not very close to my daily concerns. I greeted him, and we passed a remark or two, and then went out of each other's lives.

Today I had occasion to visit a hospital, and I chanced upon a man walking up and down the corridor. It was the same man. His wife was in a room with the door half-open, recovering from the anesthesia that had been administered for the operation she had undergone. He was waiting to greet her when she regained consciousness.

We had a little chat together, and I discovered many things. This man was more than a seller of tires and spark-plugs. He was an affectionate and anxious husband. He was a devoted father. He was a man who cared for good music and for other good things.

We talked for a few minutes, for his heart was full, and he was glad of a friendly ear. He told me many things which ordinarily he might have kept buttoned up inside his vest. Now, as I walked away from the hospital, I thought much of this man, and how little we know about a man when we judge by what means he earns his daily bread, or any of the ordinary items by which we are accustomed to describe him.

Some men are worse than you think them; but on an average I am disposed to believe that if we could know men as their hearts disclose them in the rare moments when they unguardedly show their real selves, we should hold them in higher honor than we do.

Short Story

(Copyrighted)

A MASCOT

By MARTHA MCDONOUGH WILLIAMS

An adventurous small boy snatched the puppy from the dog seller, ran with it, was chased, and, to escape being caught, hid in a dark alleyway. There he lay stunned for some time, but at last struggled to his untidy legs, whimpering faintly, and tried vainly to climb the steps to the street. Morton found it as he came out of the Italian restaurant, where he had dined. He had made rather a pretense of dining, being nearly as miserable as the puppy looked. Misery loves company, hence, perhaps, his action. Into the light he strode, the dog cuddled in his palm sat down at the nearest vacant table and demanded instantly milk and hot soup. He had decided they would be comforting to the shivery, small, beast, so small it did not know how to eat when food was set before it. Morton, bending in the effort to help, was amazed to see a woman's hand stretched beside his own, while a clear voice said: "For me have him, also a spoon.
We must manage a supper some way."

Shortly he was watching a rather insouciant young person whom he had not noticed across the table when he sat down to it, dolefully feeding his poor, huddled in her lap.
"There, that will do, until next time," she said at last, as the shrunken sides rounded almost dangerously.
"Keep him warm; he will sleep.
Such a beauty is worth a whole lot of trouble."

"He isn't mine," found him outside —couldn't leave him to freeze this bitter night," Morton hazarded.
The girl smiled at him. "I'm glad you couldn't. A lost puppy is pitiable.
I know—I'm lost myself—until 10 o'clock."

"Why the time limit?" Morton asked, almost forgetting his own troubles in this new appeal to sympathy.
Again she smiled, saying: "Polly set it; she will be home then. I eat as a day ahead of my plans and was discouraged from waiting on the stairs outside her door. Do you think," looking suddenly straight at Morton,
"I look the least bit like a burglar's pal or a confidence quack?"

"A movie queen," would be nearer the truth," Morton laughed, suddenly sensing the atmosphere of uncontained breeding his questioner ex-haled. "If you are waiting here—may I keep you company? With those for chaperon—that must be his name."

"Treasure Trove," the girl repeated softly. "If I thought you'd part with him," pausing with embarrassment which Morton ended by saying:
"You can't have him 'for keeps,' but I'll lend him to you gladly—if you think Polly will permit—until I can find proper quarters for him."

"Polly loves the under dogs—and the lost ones," the girl smiled back at him. As to staying—that is as you please, I shall be glad of company, but would hate to detain you. I'm not afraid in the daylight, much less in the dark. It's hardly more than a step but I ordered my cab on the way in."

"You are a Wonder—with the capital letter," Morton returned. "As such—your name, please—that I may approach the presence properly.
Here I am," extending his own card.
"Nobody in particular, but not, I hope, wholly a bad sort."

"I'm Ruth DeSha—you never heard of me—but I know you in spite of our glum look. Betty Benton gave me one of your pictures when she —she decided to—go abroad," the girl answered. Morton flung up his head smiling bitterly. "I got her well-wishing cards the night my last play was drammed," he said. "Still, that doesn't excuse looking like a death's head."

"Do you mind—much?" Ruth asked almost underbreath. His mouth set as he nodded, but almost instantly softened. Treasure Trove had rouse and was blinking at him happily over Ruth's hands. "I rechristen him Luck," Morton all but whispered.

Ruth looked at him narrowly. "I am glad," she said. "I believe he will bring it to—both of us."

He took her home to be embraced by a rapturous Polly, who, however, deserted shamelessly at sight of Luck. Luck, indeed, became privileged—when Morton called next aftternoon he found the puppy lying in state upon puffy down cushions in the sunniest window nook, with Polly at hand sketching his every pose. "Don't mind me, good people. I shan't hear a word," she called, over her shoulder.

Ruth, ensconced on a soft couch, authorized Morton to a place beside her,
and after a little drew a hard breath, saying: "I wonder if I am going to make you think me crazy?"
"Impossible," cried Morton.
Again she smiled. "But wait till you know all. I want a playfellow—it is what I have come here for. You see, down in the grass country I've had years of reading and dreaming of life out in the world. I've had nobody to take me there—and couldn't leave grinning if I had had.
Now—she has gone—I don't want to do anything that would hurt her—but she left me a few thousands, outside my own property. I want to spend them—waste them, if you like —in making my dreams come true.
And I can't—unless you help me."
"How?" Morton asked suddenly, deciding that blishes made her beautiful.
"By playing with me—just as man to man—Dutch treat, you know—and all that—showing me whatever is worth seeing. Not risqué things—I hate fifth—but places and people where I can't go alone and where dear old Polly won't care to take me. You won't get mushy like the men at home—because of Betty, you know —we can be just pals, playing in the sunshine. Don't you think it would help you? Maybe a lot?"

"I am sure of it," Morton said almost gaily. "The plan is heavenly—except for the Dutch treat regulation. Won't you relax that? I'm not quite a pauper, if the play did get itself damned."
"I know what we can do!" Ruth cried gleefully. "Dutch treating may go hang—but you'll take me places, and then I'll take you places—and we won't ever speak or think of anything so vulgar as money—except when we are maying the cheeks."
"Handsomely compromised," Morton laughed, his first real laugh since Betty had sent back his ring. He made a strong mental reservation as to finances in future. Then, trifles being adjusted, he proceeded to serious matters, such as measuring Luck for a collar—adjustable, of course—and deciding upon the motto to be engraved on it.
Followed three blissful months.
The more he saw of Ruth the more wonderful she became. She had the finest intuitions, the kindest heart in the world. They made her deaf to Polly's entreaties as to absolute ownership of Luck.
"A diamond wrist-watch will be nearly as much trouble and a heap more stylish," she said in mitigation.
"Luck is going home with me next month; he has outgrown this town.
Just as I have and needs God's outdoors to find himself in."
"How about me? I am under the

Raisin Day—April 30th

Next Saturday is Raisin Day all over the United States—the day on which millions will make and try delicious new raisin foods. Try them in your home. Begin on that day to get the benefit of the raisin's healthful food-iron which brings the pretty rose tint to the cheeks.

Stewed Raisins

Cover one-half package of Sun-Maid Raisins with cold water and soak over night. In the morning add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on the fire in the same water in which they have been soaked and allow to cook slowly for thirty minutes. Sugar may be added but it is not necessary as Sun-Maid Raisins contain natural fruit sugar. Serve with or without cream.

Stewed Sun-Maid Raisins are as luscious a dish as was ever served at breakfast. And they bring a benefit that everyone should have.

Rich in food-iron, raisins help to make red corpuscles for the blood. When cheeks are pale the blood has too little iron.

Try Stewed Raisins on Raisin Day

—the attractive way to bring the bloom of youth to women's and children's cheeks

Raisins, through their iron content, tend to bring the rose tint back.

So raisins are "a beauty food," because they promote the good looks of good health. Serve stewed raisins at least twice a week.

Great sanitariums serve them to anaemic patients every day.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Use Sun-Maid Raisins in all your cooking, for they are the finest grown. Made from tender, juicy, thin-skinned California table grapes.

Packed in an immaculate plant in California. Clean, sweet, wholesome American raisins—the kind you know are good.

Three varieties: Sun-Maid Seeded (seeds removed); Sun-Maid Seedless (grown without seeds); Sun-Maid Clusters (on the stem). All dealers. Insist upon the Sun-Maid Brand.

NORMAL NINE IN READINESS FOR SEASON OPENER FRIDAY WITH ST. MARY'S OUTFIT

The normal school team is all primed and set for the first game with Tom Skemp's St. Mary's nine from Winona, which will take place on Normal Field Friday afternoon.

Though the locals have played but two games this year, they won both of them from teams which have had enviable records in the past. Mr. Nohr has been booking games for his team wherever possible, but due to the late date of starting the normal team, he is experiencing some difficulty, especially in scheduling out-of-town games. The game which had been arranged for with Melrose for Decoration day has been called off for various reasons.

Friday afternoon will be the first opportunity of the citizens of this city to see the newly organized normal school baseball team in action, and all that can be said is on hand. The new team has been going strong, and as far as comparisons will allow, it appears to be one of the strongest in this section of the country. The expenses of the game Friday will be defrayed by a "silver collection" which will be taken up at the grounds.

Shoot "Maplewood Hundreds" At 20 Meets This Year

BY PETER P. CARNEY
(Editor National Sports Syndicate.)

The "Maplewood Hundreds" will be shot at 20 of the leading trapshooting tournaments of the east and south this spring and summer. In fact the competition is already under way for the first of the classic events was shot in connection with the Patriots day tournament of the Boston Athletic association.

The "Maplewood Hundred" was inaugurated three years ago and has proven one of the most colorful events of the trapshooting world. The event is held in connection with important shoots, where hundreds of men and women gather, and it is regarded as a real honor to win and become eligible to shoot for the Maplewood championship in the White Mountain tournament in July.

In previous years a gold medal has been given to the winner of each "Maplewood Hundred" but this year a certificate will be given to the winner and the runner up. For the runner up is eligible to shoot in the championship at Maplewood if the winner cannot attend. All the money that was put into the preliminary prizes will go into trophies at Maplewood, for the winner of the championship will receive a gold medal and $100 in gold. There will be four other gold medals and the winner of second place will get $50 in gold and third $25 in gold.

Here is where the "Maplewood Hundreds" will be held:

Pinhurst, N. C.	April 22.
Baltimore, Md.	April 26.
New York, N. C.	May 7.
Lakewood, N. J.	May 12.
Little Falls, N. J.	May 20.
Philadelphia, Pa.	May 20.
Hartford, Conn.	May 30.
Syracuse, N. Y.	June 1.
Atlanta, Ga.	June 2.
Providence, R. I.	June 4.
Pittsburgh, Pa.	June 9.
Buffalo, N. Y.	June 13.
New Haven, Conn.	June 17.
Lawrence, Pa.	June 17.
Montpelier, Vt.	June 22.
Wilmington, Del.	June 24.
Portsmouth, N. H.	July 1.
Boston, Mass.	not set.
Maplewood, N. H.	July 7.

The championship, 20 men eligible, will be shot at Maplewood on July 9. The Maplewood tournament will take place beginning July 4 and conclude on July 9. New grounds will be used for the tournament with four traps in operation. The trophies will be worth upwards of $2,000. The American Trapshooting association classification and handicap systems will be used. We doubt if there is a better place to shoot in the United States than Maplewood. Record after record has been made at the White Mountain tournament in the past five years.

The fact that the French team and the United States Naval academy, Princeton, Yale, Penn State, and dozens of other colleges boasting performers of high rating will appear tomorrow has given unusual interest in the first day of the meeting.

WALLACE MEETS WITH MILLERS TO DISCUSS U. S. WHEAT GRADES

Producers Ask Lowering of Grades; Action Opposed by Millers

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary Wallace made an early start in an effort to conclude hearings on applications for modification of the federal spring wheat grades. Early Thursday morning he took up the matter with millers from the northwest and elsewhere who opposed any change in the federal grades, contending that it would be a serious error to reduce the standards. A corresponding reduction in the price levels must follow, they said, for there naturally would be a price readjustment to meet any lowering of grades.

Representatives from spring wheat growing states, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, accompanied by several members of congress from that section urged modification of the grades which they said were impracticable and worked a hardship on producers.

Millers from Minneapolis asked another hearing before decision is made and that the question of the economic principles underlying the grading system and its effect on the price of wheat paid to the producers be considered. The grain growers insisted on closing the hearing at this time.

APPROVE BILL TO CHANGE BASIS OF UTILITY VALUATION

Kenyon Bill Also Provides for City Operation of Utilities Without State Certificate

MADISON, Wis.—By a divided vote a committee on transportation has recommended for passage the Kenyon bill which changes the basis of valuation for public utilities in that state. The new bill provides that in the fixing of any rates, tolls, charges or schedules or joint rates the commission shall base its findings upon the original cost of utility property.

When any rates, tolls, charges or schedules or joint rates are being "fixed" under the present system the value of public utility properties for rate making proposition is based upon the physical value of the plant. The Kenyon bill further provides that municipalities of the state may operate a competing plant within its limits without first securing a certificate of public convenience and necessity.

"BLACK BEAUTY" ON ITS

OPENING RUN AT RIVOLI

Before an audience that filled the theater to overflowing, "Black Beauty" the film, opened its run at the Rivoli theater last night. And the Rivoli theater last night. The thrilling and moving story were greeted with applause which was given to the success of the screen story which has been made from Anna Sewall's famous book.

As a bit of animal photography "Black Beauty" is marvellous. The pictures involved in taking the pictures must have been tremendous, for the horses—there are dozens of them in the "cast"—seem endowed with the acting ability of human beings. Moreover, there are some scenes in the picture that surpass anything heretofore seen on the screen. Notably is this true of the fox-hunting scene, in which a huge pack of dogs trail a fox over broken country, followed by a score or more of men and women riders who splash through streams, leap fences and hedges, all at a mad run which takes the spectator's breath. There is a race between horse and man which culminates in a flying leap over a while cut across the top of the train passing below, and otherwise there are thrills, such as the fire scene, which are vivid as life. The photography and the story are such as fit the rapid action.

The story of "Black Beauty" has been followed faithfully, and with it has been interwoven a human story which is but sketched in the book, in which greed and love work out the age-old story, with the beautiful horse appearing and re-appearing as an unconscious but important figure in the plot. "Black Beauty" will remain at the Rivoli until Saturday.

DUSTIN FARNUM—MAJESTIC

Dustin Farnum will make his appearance at the Majestic theater today in a masterly adaptation of the book, "Big Happiness" by "Pan", the famous English novelist.

In this rather remarkable photograph, according to the reviewers, the scenes of which are laid in Switzerland, London, Paris and New York.

Farnum is seen as a wealthy society man and as an idler and a waster.

The story is said to have unlimited suspense element due to the unusually novel plot which necessitates the disappearance of the society man only a few days after his wedding to a cultured and refined young woman and the substitution of the waster in the place of the bridegroom.

How the "black sheep" of the aristocratic British family fulfills the task thrust upon him, how he actually becomes the living exponent of the part he played, and how this strange triangle of life works out to a happy and successful conclusion makes "Big Happiness" a really big story for a truly big actor, it is reported.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN—CASINO

In "A Burlesque on Carmen," at the Casino today, Charlie Chaplin reveals hitherto unknown powers of acting. This artistry comes as even the famous comedian comes up to the task throughout the production up to the scene in question, he is at his best in a whirlwind of comedy action. Following the scene in which he stabs Edna Purviance, "Carmen," he introduces a world of pithos and meaning into a few moments of real splendid make believe. The contrast between his usual uproarious slap stick work and this extraordinary bit of artistry serves as one of the moments not often seen in a Chaplin production.

The celebrated New York police boat engages in mid-river in a pistol battle with a boatful of river bandits. The fight takes place under and about the Brooklyn bridge and is one of the tremendously sensational incidents of the last act of the picture. An entire dancing act from Florenz Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic show and exquisite scenes from the Palais Royal Cafe were also filmed for use in the picture.

CHINESE FAMINE SUFFERERS LOOK TO U. S. FOR AID

America Loved and Admired Because She Has Treated the Chinese Right Says Reinsch

MADISON, Wis.—America is loved and admired throughout China because America has treated the Chinese like human beings with human rights. Dr. Paul S. Reinsch, former United States minister to China, has written to Prof. Daniel W. Ford, Wisconsin chairman for the China famine relief.

"The millions who are now looking death in the face in central China are not impassive, dumb creatures," Dr. Reinsch declared. "They are men and women, boys and girls, who love life as we do."

"When there comes a terrible disaster, such as the present famine, due to a few years' failure of rain, these gentle, lovable people have their hearts wrung by the sufferings of their dear ones. Their own people in the less destitute provinces make every sacrifice. But each poor helpless sufferer has also before the mind's eye the hope that somewhere in America there may be someone who will feel the heart-pull that comes from so much love for America in China."

Dr. Reinsch describes the Chinese as very human and sociable, who enjoy nothing more than chatting familiarly with a foreigner at the roadside about their family, work and village life and that of their visitors. "And when they find that you are from America, then they gather more closely about you, their eyes light up with a joyful welcome, and they want to know all about life and people in that happy distant land." They have come to look upon America as the land where live human happiness and a broad spirit of liberality and justice.

Says that Regardless of Education "WBU" Students are Prepared Equally Well for the Business World.

March 31, 1921.

Wisconsin Business University, La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Dear Friends:

Having completed my course in your school, I take great pleasure in saying a few words in regard to the "WBU".

I have found the school to be one of the best of its kind in preparing a young man or woman for the business world, regardless of their education. The Combined Course offered by your school is thorough in every way. The teachers are all willing to help the students and the attention they give is appreciated by all. The board and room service which you offer is also appreciated by students who come to the city, and have no friends or relatives there. I have many friends who have graduated from your school and they are all holding good positions, which is due to the thorough training received while attending your school.

I shall always recommend the "WBU" to anyone who is considering a business education.

Yours very truly,

Accident Jinx On Trail of This Rushford Family

RUSHFORD, Minn.—A whole continued story of hard luck seems to be happening to the family of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clouting of this city. While residing in the nearby country last winter, the oldest son was obliged to submit to an operation for appendicitis. Before he was fully recovered, his father lost his footing while climbing a ladder in the barn and in the subsequent fall, struck a manger upon his side in such a manner that it was feared several ribs might be broken and a trip to a Rushford physician was necessary.

Fortunately, there were no bones broken but while the parents were in Rushford upon this errand, one of a pair of twin girls, aged seven, fell while playing at the country school and broke her collar bone. This accident necessitated a number of other trips to a physician. Last month, a younger son was obliged to have a troublesome toe amputated and was confined to an arm-chair some time in consequence.

Last week, while this latter boy was endeavoring to straighten a large nail with a stone, the nail flew up and struck the outer corner of his right eye and it is feared that a small piece of stone may have lodged in the optic.

The day following this accident, the mother of the family received a telegram telling of the death of an aunt in Rochester, Minn., and requesting her to come to the latter place to the funeral services.
